Hello Everyone,

I'm in the process of cataloging radio equipment made by American Marconi during the period 1899 to 1919.

What I could find on my own has been posted to:

http://jproc.ca/american_marconi/equipment.html

If anyone can provide images or information for equipment which is listed or not listed, then I would like to hear from you.

Regards,

Jerry Proc

Jerry,

Extend that out to WW II. Also there was a company near me called Marconi Avionics that moved to Dallas about 10 years ago. How do they fit into the Marconi umbrella? I knew a couple of employees and neither were hams. I notice in later years 1935+ they seemed to overlapped with RCA (CR and AR equipment).

Hi Dave,

Marconi Avionics is a new one on me. Perhaps the avionics company licenced the use of Marconi's name from the parent company in the UK.

Here in Canada, Canadian Marconi (CMC) go out of the broadcasting business and home entertainment product line because they were in a conflict of interest situation with the federal government. CMC then focused on the design and sales of avionics.

In March 2007 CMC was acquired by Esterline. In 2019 Esterline was acquired by Transdigm. It's hard to keep up with these corporate acquisitions. Perhaps there is some connection between Marconi Avionics and Esterline purchasing CMC in 2007.

PS. The Marconi Wireless Company of America only existed under that name during the period 1899 to 1919. After that, the Radio Corporation of America, assumed control of all intellectual, material, and operating rights of the former MWTCA in 1919, and was granted use of crucial G.E. licenses, most important being the Alexanderson alternator. American Marconi was dissolved as a corporation in April 1920.

Kung Flu Update

13 June.

First- my family is grateful for everyone's thoughts and prayers. They've been a great comfort.

May the good Lord remember your kindness.

I'm better and slowly recovering my strength.

Kay and Annabelle are still running fevers.

Amber is just beginning to cough.

Docs say to assume everyone in the house is now positive.

I would probably no longer be contagious, except for the fact that I'm in the house with ?three contagious people. I'm praying to God
?I won't have a relapse. One "mild" round of this ?is bad enough and they say the immunity is only good for 6 months. Oh joy.

"Mild" Hantavirus illness was worse, but it was ?confined to respiratory distress and I didn't ?have to worry about giving it to the family.

This monster attacks your whole body and can
"turn on a dime," going from what feels like a cold to life-threatening over night.

Multiple the "normal" flu. Then add terrible headaches, chills and tremors, lower backache so you can't sleep, and your sense of taste and smell disappears completely.

Low to moderate fever. My fever has been gone for ?a few days. Smell and Taste came back the day I left the hospital, but are now gone again. Probably from continual assault by the live virus still being shed from Kay and the babies.

The doctors are surprised that neither Kay nor I are in the hospital on a ventilator. I credit the prayers of loved ones and friends, plus our ?therapeutic regime of quinine (tonic water)/vita. C/ Zinc.

Half a cup of the diet tonic water, morning and evening without fail.
I recommend the diet because there's more sugar
?in regular tonic water than in Cola, and you ?really don't need that much sugar everyday.
I know that certain medical authorities have
?pooh-poohed the quinine, but as you've seen
?the situation is evolving all the time and people are finding out what they believed
?one minute turns out to be false and vice versa.
?All I know is the results. I'm recovering, Kay is still active but recovering, and the doctors are scratching their heads-they tell us very few families with our health problems get away without being ventilated. That's good enough for me.

Please say an extra prayer for Annabelle, who is having the worst time, and Amber,
?who is just starting and we hope will miss the worst of it.

Thank you again for your ongoing kindness.

Hi Dave,

Your email only arrived down here in Australia today the 10th of July - that puts a whole new meaning to 'snail mail'.

I hope you're well and able to read this and that your family have all recovered. We're in our second wave of isolation but all well so far.

Obligatory BA content:

I spent some time in lockdown restoring a short wave/broadcast radio made down here in 1947 by Philips under the Mullard brand. It had an 'interesting' antenna connection through a rather flimsy 73 year old capacitor to one side of the mains, so that the mains wiring eventually leading to a pole outside would constitute a long wire antenna. There are certainly some gotchas in these old relics!

?? You certainly have my prayers and best wishes. I think too many people don't realize how bad it is.

?? When I was a kid we were going through a polio epidemic. The theme was the kid in an iron lung and nearly everyone knew someone who suffered some sort of paralysis from it. Very frightening and no one knew how it was spread. People need to take CV as seriously. Eventually we will get a vaccine, but even that is a maybe. The common cold is a CV and there is no vaccine for it. God help us all and God bless David and his family.

David:

I'm 74 yrs old. I am sheltering in place and only going outside to cut the grass and tend the garden. I was at Staples today having a bunch of MilCom gear manuals bound, but that is about all the traveling I've done. Your vivid descriptions of the Kung Flu is frightening to me and Patricia.

Rest assured you and your family are in our thoughts and prayers. Stay safe, Brother.

?? Dave actually is suffering from it so I think maybe he can call it whatever he wants.

??? FWIW, since it is a pun on kung fu I looked that up, this is quoted from Wikipedia:

In China, it refers to any study, learning, or practice that requires patience, energy, and time to complete. In its original meaning, kung fu can refer to any discipline
<<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Discipline>> or skill achieved through hard work and practice, not necessarily martial arts
<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Martial_arts>.

??? Probably applies to learning CW.

??? Who knows where this virus originated. The 1918 flu, which was called Spanish Flu seems to have originated in the United States although no one knows for certain.

Dave actually is suffering from it so I think maybe he can call it whatever he wants.

FWIW, since it is a pun on kung fu I looked that up, this is quoted from Wikipedia:

<<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Discipline>> or skill achieved through hard work and practice, not necessarily martial arts
<https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Martial_arts>.

Probably applies to learning CW.

Who knows where this virus originated. The 1918 flu, which was called Spanish Flu seems to have originated in the United States although no one knows for certain.

"hydroxychloroquine"? I'm amazed you believe that crap, Dave. Too much AM

?? Be careful, make sure you know what side effects this stuff might have. I think there has been a great deal of propaganda for it without a lot of evidence it works. I hope that is wrong and it will work for your family if you decide to try it. Right now this disease is very frightening and there does not seem to be a definite treatment for it. If this drug can be used safely then certainly try it but just be? careful that the desire to help your family does not make things worse. Please report back on what your decision is and, if you try it, how it works. I am skeptical but also an optimist.

?? My prayers are with your family and you as I am sure most of this list is regardless of our politics.

I'm 74 yrs old. I am sheltering in place and only going outside to cut the grass and tend the garden. I was at Staples today having a bunch of MilCom gear manuals bound, but that is about all the traveling I've done. Your vivid descriptions of the Kung Flu is frightening to me and Patricia.

Rest assured you and your family are in our thoughts and prayers. Stay safe, Brother.

Kung Flu Update
13 June.

First- my family is grateful for everyone's thoughts and prayers. They've been a great comfort. May the good Lord remember your kindness.

I'm better and slowly recovering my strength. Kay and Annabelle are still running fevers. Amber is just beginning to cough. Docs say to assume everyone in the house is now positive.

I would probably no longer be contagious, except for the fact that I'm in the house with three contagious people. I'm praying to God I won't have a relapse. One "mild" round of this is bad enough and they say the immunity is only good for 6 months. Oh joy. "Mild" Hantavirus illness was worse, but it was confined to respiratory distress and I didn't have to worry about giving it to the family. This monster attacks your whole body and can

"turn on a dime," going from what feels like a cold to life-threatening over night.

Multiple the "normal" flu. Then add terrible headaches, chills and tremors, lower backache so you can't sleep, and your sense of taste and smell disappears completely.

Low to moderate fever. My fever has been gone for a few days. Smell and Taste came back the day I left the hospital, but are now gone again. Probably from continual assault by the live virus still being shed from Kay and the babies.

The doctors are surprised that neither Kay nor I are in the hospital on a ventilator. I credit the prayers of loved ones and friends, plus our therapeutic regime of quinine (tonic water)/vita. C/ Zinc.

Half a cup of the diet tonic water, morning and evening without fail.

I recommend the diet because there's more sugar in regular tonic water than in Cola, and you really don't need that much sugar everyday. I know that certain medical authorities have pooh-poohed the quinine, but as you've seen the situation is evolving all the time and people are finding out what they believed one minute turns out to be false and vice versa. All I know is the results. I'm recovering, Kay is still active but recovering, and the doctors are scratching their heads- they tell us very few families with our health problems get away without being ventilated. That's good enough for me.

Please say an extra prayer for Annabelle, who is having the worst time, and Amber, who is just starting and we hope will miss the worst of it.

Thank you again for your ongoing kindness.

Message-ID: <64f76ee1-eea4-6eb4-979b-a44e0ef1c713@ix.netcom.com>

I recently responded to a kind letter.

Because some have asked, and in the hopes it may be of help to others,? I've copied some of that letter (with some clarifications) here:

Some background:

I (63) am heavy, skin cancer, diabetic and have damaged lungs from 17 years of 3-pack-a-day smoking (quit in the late 80s).

Kay (56) has a compromised immune system, badly damaged lungs worse than mine (not from smoking) and type-A blood (all risk factors).

Amber (26) has a heart condition but is otherwise healthy.

Annabelle (17) is heavy but otherwise OK.

(Amanda and Stephanie don't live with us.)

So getting this nightmare was and is frightening.

Kay's doctors and mine were both very concerned for our survival should we contract it.? I updated my will.

Since some time in April, my family has been taking a daily regime of diet Tonic Water with Quinine (half a cup in the morning, half a cup in the evening.? None-diet contains WAY too much sugar), 100 mG of Zinc Pecolate, 1000 mG of Vitamin C and a multivitamin containing D3.

I was first to contract it (probably from work).? I ran a low fever and had a dry cough.? Mild skin rashes.? Lost taste and smell.
My family doctor advised I go to the ER because of my health issues.? I tested positive and a chest scan showed very early, light pneumonia in my upper lungs.? They sent me to be admitted to a local hospital.? I never got any worse than that so they sent me home.
My doctor was puzzled but glad.? I went home to quarantine after two days and a night admitted.? My smell came back while I was still at the hospital, enough to let them know the bathroom smelled like a septic tank! (LOL) .

Kay was never hospitalized.? Her symptoms were similar to mine.
That she didn't end-up in ICU on a vent (near 80% fatal last I heard) just astonished her lung and immune doctors.?? She never had more than a slight fever and mild cough.? My cough was worse.
Once better, she slacked-up on the daily Quinine dose.
She has now tested "positive" again after two weeks without issues, but she has had no fever and only a mild cough.
Her sense of taste and smell left again
(a near universal sign of infection).

Amber never had any symptoms beyond a slight cough, despite living in close-quarters with three infected people.? She is the most fit of us all, so that is certainly a factor.? She is religious about the daily regime, as am I and we seem to be OK so far.

Annabelle's case was different.? It has since come-out that she was taking the daily regime only "hit-and-miss" because "it tastes bad."? Young people... sigh.
She became desperately ill, was in hospital seven days and Kay stayed in isolation with her.? Despite Kay's own conditions and being "in the belly of the beast,"? Kay never worsened and with all the prayers of many wonderful people (Lord remember their kindness on That Great Day), The hospital gave Anna fluids, oxygen and blood thinners to prevent clots.? They gave her medications for vomiting and coughing.? The docs told Kay to give her Vitamin D when we got home.

Annabelle was at great risk for days, but she made a remarkable and rapid recovery and came home without oxygen two days after her turn-around.
She and Kay went into our poor attempt at "in home quarantine" for 14 days- a trial in itself.

Ever been locked in a room with the same person for two weeks??? Anna is still fragile, but home and going about her daily routines.? She seems better every day.

In-home quarantine:

We tried with a bedroom, but we don't live in a hospital isolation ward- just a drafty old 1930s house with people in it.? Maybe wealthy folks can create a room with two feet of insulation, sealed with an air-exchange system and an air-lock for food and supplies, but I think most of us are probably "spinning our wheels" on in-home isolation.? Close your front door, get porch delivery, support each other until you're 7 days past Positive and 3 days fever-free, which are the latest guidelines I've heard.

Many people "pooh-pooh" such "home-spun" remedies.
I'm a practical man- I know only my results.? I care for what works and wouldn't believe Uncle Scam's orcs if they told me water was wet.

Government medical entities are corrupt-
Not the doctors and nurses; they're caught in the same trap as all of us.? The CDC, WHO, NIH, Big Pharma, Big Hospital-, when hundred of millions of bucks can be extorted for a "new vaccine," would they use their media prostitutes to destroy a $50 treatment, especially one touted by Trump?
Oh, YES.? Who cares how many die?
Making more just like them every day and the evil orcs at the top know they will never be touched or held accountable-? in this life...

I frankly don't care who does or does not think I'm being a fool-they are entitled to their view and it's "no skin off me-" I understand their sincerity; I just don't agree (that's still allowed on my side of the "social" fence ;-).
I'm just an old man- I care what works.
And I am humbly, deeply grateful for one thing that, in my life, has proven itself again and again- the kindness and prayers of people just like you.

P.S. something I should clarify:

Being easily fatigued and mental "fog" are long-term consequences of this disease.? I'm still easily tired, but it's getting a little better each day.
The mental fog is real- it's affecting work to a degree.
Can't remember everything that happened at the beginning of this crud.? I went back and read older posts and they included more detail of the flu-like symptoms I had.

Cognitive problems scare the hell out of me.
I can get along without misc. bits and pieces, but I got to have my hands and my mind, please.

Well, the worrisome thing about hydroxychloroquine is that it can cause cardiac arrhythmias, some of which can tend toward blood clots and consequent strokes. Wouldn't use it, myself.

Dave,

Thank you very much for sharing your recommendations for fighting Covid-19. My response is simple. If it helped you and your family, then that's reason enough for me to consider using it for me and my family!

Everyone is different. The recommendations may work, then again, they may not. But one thing is for sure, you'll never know unless you try. On the chance that they might work as well for me and my family as they did for Dave and his, I'm all in.

Prayers, Dave, for you and your family and special prayers for Annabelle.
Sending positive energy and healing thoughts,
Tom KE4RHH

It would be interesting to know more about who built this - and why:

<https://www.ebay.com/itm/AM265-Vtg-Telegraph-Ham-Radio-Morse-Code-Key-Keyer-Transmitter/392753464407>

(note: the AM265 is just the sellers ID number)

The yellow plastic spool is curious in that it appears to be bare wire, and applying the Mark 8 Eyeball to the label confirms that would be consistent with products from Hoskins Manufacturing Co, Detroit:

"In 1905, Albert Leroy Marsh and William Hoskins of Chicago invented Chromel. Made of four parts nickel and one part chromium, it was the first metallic combination to serve as a heating element. For this, Marsh was acclaimed as "father of the electrical heating industry." The patent was acquired February 1906. Shortly thereafter, in 1908, Hoskins Manufacturing was formed and moved to Detroit.

The new alloy was 300 times stronger than other types at that time. Toasters, dental furnaces and Chromel wire for appliance manufacturers were the first focus of Hoskins. The first two were unprofitable and were later dropped. The company concentrated on manufacturing the Chromel wire. Albert Marsh served as general manager of the company until his death in 1944."

But how does a spool of Chromel wire (most commonly used to make positive conductors for thermocouples) factor into this device, especially since it appears to be sitting in a separate compartment?? Pretty doubtful this was used for communications, and I sure wouldn't want to have been living nearby when it was in use!

Among all the mysterious "whazzit" items I remember seeing, this one rises to the top.

Could we be looking at a homebrew arc transmitter? The coil of Chromel wire could be for a continuous feed arc electrode. The plumbing for a continuous feed from a hydrogen generator to the arc chamber. And that one paddle on a lever that looks sort-of like a Morse key, could be just that: a key for FSK modulating the transmitter.
Just my wild-ass imagination:

I wouldn't pound that brass with a ten foot insulator.

Could we be looking at a homebrew arc transmitter? The coil of Chromel wire could be for a continuous feed arc electrode. The plumbing for a continuous feed from a hydrogen generator to the arc chamber. And that one paddle on a lever that looks sort-of like a Morse key, could be just that: a key for FSK modulating the transmitter.

Just my wild-ass imagination:

Are there a lot of racists here?

I might just remind list members that "Spanish Flu" seemed to have started in a US camp (Kentucky?), so perhaps it ought to be renamed "American Flu"?

Folks,

A friend of mine and member of the New Mexico Radio Collectors Club is in need of an 8 inch Rola Speaker with a 2000 ohm field coil to complete the restoration of a 1930s Wurlitzer Radio. The one currently in the radio has an open field coil. If you can help him out, please contact Mark Toppo at lynntoppo at cox.net .

Thanks,

Hi Jim!

Tell your friend to contact Nick DeRazio at thespeakershop.com. Nick can rebuild the field coil. That will be much less of a headache than trying to find a speaker for a 1930's Wurlitzer. Nick has been doing this for YEARS

You can generally disassemble such speakers and rewind the field coil, easiest if you have, or have access to, a lathe. Measure the diameter of the old wire, use the same gauge and fill the available space.

Also, a wanted ad in the newsletter of:

The Mid-Atlantic Antique Radio Club

<http://www.maarc.org/>

May well bring contact with someone who has one for sale.

Note: The Role company apparently still makes permanent magnet speakers used in guitar amplifiers and home organs. Use of one of those, commonly called ?Alinco? speakers would mean you'd need a B+ choke in addition.

This kind of thing is best left to some one who has the equipment to do what Scott described, which is why I suggested Nick DeRazio. That is his bag. It's kinda like building a replacement coil assy for a 2nd IF in a 75A4. Unless you have the gear, the specs, and the experience, it's best left to those who know what they are doing. Most of us don't have the equipment, or knowledge to do that job. Nick can do that without sacrificing the spider, the voice coil and and re-center the pole and then CHECK his work, before it leaves the shop.

I will second that recommendation on Nick DeRazio. His work is second to none, he has vintage cones and parts and he knows his speakers. I will only send my vintage hard to replace speakers to Nick. He just recently did an 8" Magnavox PM type equipped with the big horseshoe magnet and?special thin double roll paper for an open exposed cone National AGS-X aircraft ground station, table rack mounted receiver and it's identical to the original!
